

finding the perfect finance fit

Credited for introducing Savile Row tailoring to a new generation, Ozwald Boateng is one of the world's most renowned tailors and designers. Working from 'Bespoke Couture', Boateng's flagship store on Savile Row, Head of Finance, Iryna Stepchencko, required a new system to meet increasing business demand.

"The team takes a personal approach to offering advice and works hard to help clients avoid the hassle of arranging finance themselves."

"As a store with a global reputation, we are experiencing ever-growing demands for our clothing and services," said Iryna. "We had outgrown our systems and required new technologies that enhanced our stock control and till operations. However, while we required new systems to improve efficiency, it was important we kept access to revenue for use in other areas."

Iryna's requirements led her to IQ Finance, where she received guidance on solutions that would reduce initial expenditure and improve tax efficiency while securing the right technologies. "I have found IQ Finance to be nothing less than exceptional. The team takes a personal approach to offering advice and works hard to help clients avoid the hassle of arranging finance themselves."

With the new system on its way and the finance solution in place, Iryna would not hesitate to recommend IQ Finance to others. "It's essential for businesses to access the technologies they need to grow. However, this shouldn't come at the expense of investing outright in technologies that may be replaced in later years. IQ Finance shows there are better alternatives that help free up your finances for other areas and reduce costs."
